AUSTRALIAN INSTITUTE of COMPANY DIRECTORS

AICD Innovate Reconciliation Action Plan

ditira.

SEPTEMBER 2017 - SEPTEMBER 2019

The Australian Institute of Company Directors acknowledges the Gadigal people of the Eora Nation as the Traditional Owners of the land on which the organisation's national office is located.

We respectfully recognise Elders past, present and future.

We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of lands across Australia where division offices are located, in Adelaide, Brisbane, Canberra, Hobart, Melbourne and Perth and their Elders both past and present.

We would also like to recognise the individuals and organisations we have worked with during the development of our Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP) and those over many years that have provided input, advice and support for the development of our Indigenous governance programs. We recognise the importance of working together with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples for the future sustainability and strength of our organisations and communities.

Ngiyakai Yapung – 'This Way Together'

Ngiyakai, meaning 'this way together', tells the story of the Australian Institute of Company Directors and our commitment to excellence in governance. Central to the artwork are three interconnected meeting circles, which hold great importance. They depict the Australian Institute of Company Directors and reflect our mission to make a positive impact on society and the economy through three key actions: governance education, director development and advocacy.

These three central gathering circles also represent stakeholders coming together around a shared vision of closing the gap for Aboriginal people, highlighting our commitment towards reconciliation across the three key actions: relationships, respect and opportunities.

Encompassing the central imagery are 12 meeting circles, representing the AICD national board. Double coloured rings are reflective of their leadership role and their two-fold aim to be both key influencers in world-leading governance and key players in achieving world-leading performance in governance principles. Set upon a backdrop of country, the organisation imagery radiates outward embracing our nation and all communities. This is highlighted through seven meeting circles, each displaying the symbol for people, holding a threefold meaning:

- The people symbols respectfully acknowledge Aboriginal people and their communities. The symbols embrace all community and highlight that our members are the foundation of our organisations. It also pays tribute to all stakeholders who have played a part on this reconciliation journey.
- The seven meeting circles are reflective of our national footprint upon country across seven state and territory divisions.
- This symbolism speaks of respectful relationships, working together and the possibilities for reconciliation within our Reconciliation Action Plan.

This unique artwork is reflective of the Australian Institute of Company Directors, and our leadership in contributing to strong organisations through good governance and our commitment to closing the gap through respectful relationships.

Promoting diversity and inclusion in Australia's boardrooms

I am proud to introduce the Australian Institute of Company Directors' (AICD) formal commitment to reconciliation with our first Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP).

The AICD has a strong respect for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. We are proud of the relationships and partnerships we have built over the years with emerging and experienced Indigenous directors and their organisations.

Developing our first RAP over the past 12 months has been a rewarding journey. It has enabled us to reflect on and celebrate our achievements thus far, while also recognising that much more can be done to empower, to educate, to learn from, collaborate and connect with Australia's Indigenous peoples.

We have created a RAP that allows us as an organisation to make an impact using our defining strengths: governance expertise and leadership. It is closely aligned to our organisational strategy and is underpinned by our core values.

This document signals our commitment across three key areas: relationships, respect and opportunities. Over the next three years we commit to strengthening and increasing the number of meaningful, respectful relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors, their organisations and their communities. We commit to raising cultural awareness by increasing the recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, their histories and their contributions. We commit to improving Indigenous peoples' access to quality governance education, with the view to enabling them to direct and lead sustainable and successful organisations. We commit to continuing to advocate for and promote diversity and inclusion in Australia's boardrooms.

The Indigenous people of Australia hold a special place in society. It is incumbent on all organisations to reach out to Indigenous people and their communities to correct injustices of marginalisation and discrimination. Developing and implementing a Reconciliation Action Plan is not just the 'right' or 'good' thing to do; it is also the smart thing to do for business, for the economy and for the nation. It has a proven positive effect on the efficiency and effectiveness of the workforce, on staff engagement and satisfaction, on compliance and on relationships with a range of stakeholders.

Our 2017–19 plan sets out a clear path to continue to reflect on and begin to embed reconciliation values across everything we do. It will ensure the ongoing respect, inclusion and access to opportunities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

I look forward to continuing this important work towards reconciliation, together with our staff, our members and the wider governance community.

A commitment to greater economic and social equity

The AICD's first RAP represents an important commitment from our organisation to foster greater economic and social equity for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples.

While the AICD is doing substantial work with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples and the organisations in which they are involved, this document is intended to formalise and advance our commitment to this outcome. It is incumbent on every organisation in Australia, and central to their good governance, to set out and implement steps they can take to contribute to reconciliation. As a leading advocate of excellence in governance in Australia, the AICD must set an example in its words and actions in this area.

This Innovate RAP focuses on leadership and governance in keeping with the mission of the AICD.

AICD membership provides valuable benefits in terms of opening doors and helping directors stay up-to-date on their duties and responsibilities. Being part of the AICD marks out our members as capable and current directors. Equity in Australia's boardrooms should mirror the accessibility of AICD membership. A fundamental part of this RAP will be to develop a strategy to increase our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander membership so that more Indigenous people have access to the benefits it provides directors as they advance their careers.

We are a global leader in governance education. This document commits the AICD to improving access to governance education and knowledge to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people through scholarships and dedicated events. We will review our Indigenous Governance Program to ensure that it is valuable and helpful for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors and organisations, recognising the unique challenges they face in complying with the Corporations (Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander) Act 2006. We will also use our voice to advocate on behalf of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations, beginning by conducting a review of the governance issues they face. We will investigate possible research projects and partnerships to advance knowledge in this area. And we will work with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations to ensure their governance structures are beneficial to their needs.

These are just some of the initiatives that are outlined for the 2017 to 2019 period which this RAP covers. As AICD CEO, I am honoured and excited to oversee its implementation.

In October 2017, as this RAP was being finalised, the AICD held a member event at the Parrtjima light festival in Alice Springs. At the event Bundjalung woman Rhoda Roberts AO, Parrtjima curator and head of First Nations Programming at the Sydney Opera House, spoke of the power of RAPs to hold organisations to account and achieve change. However, she also warned this can only happen if the whole organisation buys in.

"Unless there is commitment from the whole organisation, so every sector of your company is attending to the RAP, that's the only way it can work. If it's just a section of people, it filters out. But if you have a whole-of-organisation commitment, it's extraordinary what it can bring," Roberts said. With a concerted effort from our dedicated and talented staff and our 41,000 members, which include some of Australia's most visionary leaders, I am confident the AICD will make its contribution to the vital work of reconciliation and equity for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples.

Angus Armour FAICD CEO and Managing Director, Australian Institute of Company Directors

"It is incumbent on every organisation in Australia, and central to their good governance, to set out and implement steps they can take to contribute to reconciliation. As a leading advocate of excellence in governance in Australia, the AICD must set an example in its words and actions in this area."

Our vision for reconciliation

The AICD's vision for reconciliation is a just, equitable and inclusive Australia, where the diversity of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' culture and heritage is recognised, respected and celebrated and past injustices are acknowledged. Our involvement in this vision is to see our organisation's purpose – excellence in governance – come to life for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in their communities and the organisations in which they are involved.

We are committed to developing the governance knowledge and directorship capability of Indigenous people in Australia and promoting diversity to work towards equal opportunity across business, government and community organisations.

Our first Reconciliation Action Plan is our commitment to working towards genuine and lasting reconciliation in Australia.

"We are committed to developing the governance knowledge and directorship capability of Indigenous people in Australia and promoting diversity to work towards equal opportunity across business, government and community organisations."

Our business

The Australian Institute of Company Directors (AICD) is committed to excellence in governance. We make a positive impact on society and the economy through governance education, director development and advocacy. Our membership of more than 41,000 includes directors and senior leaders from business, government and the not-for-profit sectors.

We are a national organisation with seven state and territory divisions, consisting of over 250 employees, none of whom have identified themselves as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. The national office is in Sydney and we have offices in all Australian states, the ACT and representation in the Northern Territory.

We deliver governance education and events, develop policy on director issues, provide consultancy and advisory services to clients, publish the Company Director magazine, updates and tools covering governance bestpractice. We also play an advocacy role representing the views of our members and promoting policy reform in the interests of excellence in governance.

We are a founding member of the Global Network of Director Institutes (GNDI). Membership of GNDI provides us with a forum to demonstrate the leadership of Australian directors internationally and to share expertise in corporate governance and professional director development.

Activities in relation to Indigenous people, organisations and governance are run at a state and business unit level. In 2008, we piloted an Indigenous Governance Program, designed and developed with the support of Indigenous Business Australia (IBA). This course has been the most widely-used of our Indigenous education programs. The Indigenous Governance Program recognises the unique challenges faced by the boards of medium and large Indigenous organisations that must comply with the Corporations (Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander) Act 2006 instead of Corporations Act 2001.

In addition to the educational programs devised with support from external parties, a number of scholarships have been offered to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people both through the Board Diversity Scholarship Program co-funded by the Federal Government and other programs run through our state divisions. Since 2014, 100 full and partial scholarships have been awarded to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors, with particular emphasis on female recipients.

Further, we work closely with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations on in-house programs and governance self-assessments, which facilitate collective self-reflection by a board of its governance practices. Since 2014, we have facilitated governance selfassessments using our Governance Analysis Tool[™] with five Aboriginal organisations or organisations servicing Aboriginal communities.

We are committed to developing the governance knowledge and directorship capability of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and boards. We aim to help increase their effectiveness in terms of the oversight and monitoring of their organisations and to increase their board's and organisation's performance. We are also committed to working more closely with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander individuals and organisations on advocacy and policy issues for the benefit and future sustainability of these organisations and the jurisdictions in which they operate.

Our values

Our values underpin our mission. We have five values which are the filters we apply to our everyday decision making and are reflected in the actions and deliverables laid out in our Reconciliation Action Plan.

True Professionalism – Strive for new heights We represent excellence in governance and directorship.

Positive Influence – Start the wave of inspiration

We deliver continuing learning and enrich the expertise of directors in Australia.

Powerful Together – Move forward as one

We facilitate a network of members who, by coming together, can advance their own capabilities and opportunities to become better directors.

Dynamic Performance – Be one step ahead

We are committed to advancing our performance and the performance of directors in Australia.

Lasting Impact – Leave behind more than you found

We are responsible for influencing the quality of directorship and good governance in Australia. The quality with which we do this resonates around board rooms, through businesses, in our economy and across our community.

Our commitment

We are committed to:

- Improving access to opportunities to participate in governance education for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities.
- Developing the governance knowledge and directorship capability of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and their boards to help increase the quality of governance and improve organisational performance.
- Leading by example by actively encouraging our staff and our members to develop meaningful relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities.
- Encouraging the learning and celebration of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and histories within the organisation.
- Promoting the representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples within our internal and external workforce and membership base.
- Engaging with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and organisations on advocacy and policy issues for the benefit and future sustainability of these organisations and the jurisdictions in which they operate.

"The AICD is committed to contributing to the reconciliation process with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples through our governance education, director development and advocacy. I am excited to formally record our commitment and vision for reconciliation in our first Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP). I thank and acknowledge all who have worked so collaboratively in developing our RAP, which will provide us with focus and clarity to continue to pursue our reconciliation journey."

Case study: Ngurra Kujungka Council

Ngurra Kujungka Inc. leads the development and delivery of the Western Desert's first communitydriven regional sport and recreation program. Ngurra Kujungka has provided a wide range of sport and recreation, training, education and employment opportunities for people of the Western Desert. Most recently, it has grown to establish art, music and culture programs for the community.

Ngurra Kujungka is a not-for-profit (NFP) organisation and is overseen by a group of 10 council delegates that represent the unique interests of the different community groups in the Western Desert region.

As part of a funding application, the council identified three education providers with the ability to deliver the training it needed to improve operational processes.

The Australian Institute of Company Directors (AICD) was chosen because of its strong reputation as a leading governance education provider and unique ability to provide a tailored program. Ngurra Kujungka Council sought to improve their operational efficiency and help councillors to better understand their roles. In light of Ngurra Kujungka's unique community offering and operating environment, the leadership team were looking for a program that would assist in improving the council's reporting processes and provide council members a better understanding of their roles and facilitating structured 'decision-making'.

Following an initial consultation and assessment, the AICD recommended that expert facilitator and experienced NFP company director David Evans FAICD deliver a tailored Indigenous governance solution for the council. David has extensive experience in delivering corporate governance, Indigenous governance, and strategy and risk education to board directors and executives across Australia.

"The consultation process was very good. The AICD was extremely flexible with the method to deliver the program,"

- Milton Chapman, Council Delegate

The program was delivered in an easyto-understand and effective method over 18 months. Six courses were scheduled alongside the quarterly council meetings and sports events. Through board mentoring, David Evans helped the council embed the learnings after each course.

Council members now have an improved understanding of their roles and have implemented refreshed decision-making processes.

"It has been extremely worthwhile and it has greatly benefited our organisation."

- Milton Chapman, Council Delegate

As a result, Ngurra Kujungka Council has improved the way it approaches developing its forward-looking strategy – and now has a clear focus on the 'bigger picture' and long-term vision for the community it serves.

Our journey

- 1990 The Australian Institute of Company Directors (AICD) was established following the merger of the Institute of Directors in Australia and the Company Directors Association of Australia.
- 1975 The first iteration of the AICD's flagship education program, the Company Directors Course™, was run.
- 2006 The Corporations (Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander) Act 2006 (CATSI Act) was passed and commenced operation in 2007. Over 2,000 Indigenous organisations were registered under the CATSI Act. Since then, many organisations have been registered under different acts to the CATSI Act.
- 2008 With financial support of, and in conjunction with, Indigenous Business Australia, the AICD developed a specific training program designed for medium to large Indigenous organisations called the Indigenous Governance Program.
- 2009 The AICD launched the first Company Directors Course for Indigenous Business Leaders in partnership with the Commonwealth Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations (DEEWR).

- 2014 The Western Australia Division of the AICD offered 26 partial scholarships for the Company Directors Course for Indigenous Business Leaders.
- 2014 The AICD ran 62 in-house Indigenous governance programs for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations.
- 2015 The AICD celebrated 40 years of the Company Directors Course.
- 2015 The AICD awarded 55 Cultural Diversity scholarships to emerging female directors.Recipients included Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander leaders across Australia.
- 2016 The AICD committed to developing a Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP).
- 2017 The AICD reached more than 41,000 members in 2017. The AICD is now the largest director institute in the world.

Our Reconciliation Action Plan

Our Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP) is a reflection of the journey we have taken in developing our relationships with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander community. It signals our commitment to strengthen and increase our relationships with stakeholders and ensure that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors have access to quality governance education and knowledge that enables them to direct sustainable and thriving organisations.

Our RAP enables us to reflect on the progress we have made and to celebrate our achievements, whilst recognising there is significant work to be done to ensure that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples have access to the same resources, opportunities and benefits that many non-Indigenous Australians enjoy.

This RAP focuses on the areas that we believe we as an organisation can add real value, namely governance and leadership. We can lead by example, by demonstrating to our members our commitment to reconciliation and support for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors and organisations.

We can ensure that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have access to our governance education offerings. Any programs and education we do provide also should meet the specific needs of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and assist them to build their individual capacities as directors.

As an organisation of more than 41,000 national and international members, we recognise the importance of advocating for the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and working with our Federal and State Governments to ensure that the right structures are in place to benefit Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations. By working with individuals and organisations that have significant knowledge and understanding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations, we can ensure our support is effective, respectful and inclusive.

The RAP working group is led by the Board Diversity Manager within the Advocacy team. AICD's Chief Executive Officer is the RAP Champion. The RAP working group consists of the following individuals by job title across the organisation: Senior Project Manager, Education; Senior Human Resources Manager; Members and Directors Manager (NT); Sector Leader, NFP, Members & Directors Executive (Solutions & Programs); Senior Communications Executive; Head of Strategic Alliances & Events; Program Manager, Advisory, Legal Counsel and Account Manager, Advisory. The RAP working group also consists of representatives from the Arnhem Land Progress Aboriginal Corporation (ALPA).

The Arnhem Land Progress Aboriginal Corporation, or ALPA, was established in 1972 as a co-operative of community stores in Arnhem Land. Today ALPA has grown to be the largest Aboriginal Corporation in Australia and operates in 27 remote locations across the Northern Territory (NT) and Queensland. With a vision of "unity through enterprise" ALPA now contributes to the development of local economies and indigenous business where they operate. Today ALPA is one of the largest independent employers of Aboriginal people in Australia.

ALPA and AICD have worked together in the delivery of Indigenous governance programs to their board and other community representatives and their CEO was a previous member of the NT AICD Committee. ALPA also have representatives on RAP advisory groups for Broad-spectrum and Swinburne University, both of whom have achieved the 'Elevate' RAP.

ALPA are looking forward to working closely with the AICD over the next two years on the implementation of their first RAP. Our RAP incorporates the Innovate RAP key action areas of 'relationships', 'respect' and 'opportunities' into six key areas, and also includes ways in which we plan to measure the progress and track the success of the range of initiatives set out in the Plan.

1. Governance and Management

We commit to increasing our engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander directors to seek their contribution to the work that we do, in particular in formulating our strategy and areas of focus.

2. Relationships

We will work towards building positive and effective partnerships between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, our staff and our members.

3. Respect and cultural awareness

By increasing the recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, their histories and cultures amongst our members and staff, we will build respectful relationships that will seek to increase the collaboration between organisations and communities.

4. Participation and opportunities

We are committed to creating opportunities for greater participation by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples within the organisation and in our range of governance education courses.

5. Advocacy

We have an important role in advocating for the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. We will use our influence to help ensure their voices are heard on governance issues.

6. Tracking and progress

Through effective monitoring and tracking of our progress, we can ensure we are truly embedding the RAP within our organisational strategy and positively contributing to reconciliation.

Innovate RAP Relationships

Sustainable and connected relationships between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders and other Australians are important to us. We are committed to building a culture of trust, respect and inclusion, where all employees, members and the wider community appreciate our values and our belief in the positive impact diversity makes on business and the wider community. Fostering an environment that promotes cultural differences and celebrates the diversity of the Australian community enables us access to a broad range of views and talent which ultimately contribute to better-governed organisations.
